Entertaining Goa

YOUR JOURNEY TO

Goa - The 1960's Portuguese Colony of India

Goa stands out in India for its Portuguese colonial architecture and heritage. Goa owns an uninterrupted string of golden-sand beaches overlooking the Arabian Sea. The best bit, you can choose a beach as per your activity of preference and terrains they offer such as Anjuna known for its hippy lifestyle, Baga known best for chic beach café bars, Calangute for adventure activities, and many others. But Goa is much more than just beaches and parties. There's a reason why Portuguese were so excited and invaded Goa in 1510. Resulting in a kaleidoscopic blend of Indian and Portuguese cultures, sweetened with sun, sea, sand, seafood and spirituality, and there's nowhere in India quite like it. The scents and spices offer a unique flavor to Goan cuisine that will tantalize the modern traveller. With its infusions of Wine, Vinegar and Garlic, the Indo-Portuguese influence is a treat for the tastebuds. We suggest some must try local specialty dishes Goan Fish Curry, Bhali-Pau (bread roll dipped in curry), or a Piquant Vindaloo amongst others.

Old Goa, also called Velha Goa, is beside the Mandovi River in the western Indian state of Goa. The former capital of Portuguese India, it's known for colonial-era monuments like the Basilica of Bom Jesus, with the remains of St. Francis Xavier, and the domed Church of St. Cajetan, inspired by St. Peter's in Rome. Nearby, the vast Se Cathedral, built in the 16th–17th centuries, has ornate chapels and a bell tower

Authentic Goan Cuisine consist of local elements that compliment Goa's location by the shores of Aranian Sea. Main ingredients include: Seafood, Coconut, Rice, Fresh Vegetables, Pork, Meat and Regional Spices. Moreover, Goa's tropical climate compliments its intense spices and flavors. Use of Kokum Spice offers a distinct flavor to Goan meals especially incomplete without Fish. It is evident that Goan Meals are a mix of Indo-Portuguese as the region was a Portuguese Colony for over 400 years.
